The Great Sheve Dagong Pagoda in the City of Rangoon. Here are the first impressions of Burmali from a high official, dated from Rangeon says the London World: "We got into the Rangoon river early o Sanday. The banks are very low. Nothing to see until the sunlight lights up the gilded dome of the great Sheve Dagong Pa goda, which dominates the city. The days are hot, and the nights cool and pleasant. "Yesterday morning we went to the great pagoda—the golden temple on three hills. You ascend to it by a covered stair-way, on either side of which are stalls kepi by women for the sale of toys, dolls, candles, incens, etc. At the top of the stair is paved court, in the center the pagoda, 250 feet high, covered from base to topmost pinascle with thick gold.

"All around are quaint buildings, some holding figures of Buddha, some containing bells of enormous size. About all these a bells of enormous size. About all these a gay and merry crowd—men, women and children—talking, laughing, eating, drinking, praying; all dressed in good bright colors, good-tempered and thoroughly en loying themselves.

"No dirt, no scowls, but a light-hearted, happy crowd whom it was a pleasure to contemplate, and from whom one got only friendly looks and cheerful courtesy. No blace that I have seen in the Indian Empered has pleased and interested me as much.

"The bride of a Burmese wedding yesterity was a pretty, graceful girl, and as hapby was a pretty, graceful girl, and as hap-y as any English bride. All this is unlike india. The women enjoy great freedom, we much more industrious than the men and are respected accordingly."

There is not much really original or Simeval forest left standing in New Jer-by. That is, there are few, if any, large lacts of forest that have not been cut off a some time since the settlement of the state by white men. There is a small piece of white oak woods on the farm of Mr. Toomas Lawrence, near Hamburg, in Sussex County, which has never been cut. These trees over a remarkable hill or These trees cover a remarkable hill, or long, parrow ridge, which rises eighty or one hundred feet above the fertile valley of the Wallkill river, and one would have to travel far to find a more interesting or attractive grove. Though they stand very near to the busy haunts of men, the great trees are populous with gray squirrels, who appear to have learned to feel entirely confortable and secure among them.

Alexander Dumas is one of the few modern authors possessing enough of this world's goods to live handsomely. He has a charming chalet near Dioppe, which is mantled by twy and filled with pretty fur. mantled by ivy and filled with pretty furture and valuable pictures. Then he has a splendid house in Paris, which contains marvelous treasures of art. Dumas is now a strong and vigorous man, who bears his sixty-four years well, and with his keen eyes twinkling with wit and malice, his short brush-light mustache, robust appearance and creek stature, he gives one an impression that he is either a General on half pay or a retired planter.
